

GENERAL INDEX.

VOL. XII. THIRD SERIES.

ALEXANDER's Examination of the "Reasons for Attachment to the Church of England," 42; extract, 43.

Australia, see Lang.

Biblical Cabinet, vols. 3 to 6, 154; contents, 155; extract, 155-57.

Biblical Criticism. See Conybeare; and Horne's Introduction.

Biblical Keepsake, 496; contents, 502; surprisingly cheap, ib.

Blakey's Essay towards an easy and useful System of Logic, 198; during the middle ages, victory, not truth, the object of desire, 199; definition of the term logic, 200; a want of analysis throughout the present volume, 202; Euclid frequently recommended to fortify the reasoning powers, ib.; author completely mistakes the nature of the syllogism, 203; present work has a moral and religious tendency, 204.

Bow, the, in the Cloud, 33; appeal for the injured African, 34, 5; the mother, 37; ode on the abolition of slavery, 38, 9; the birthright of Britons, 39, 40; list of contributors to the volume, 41.

Bulwer's letter to a late cabinet minister on the present crisis, 507; no reason assigned for the late dismissal of the ministry, ib.; could no suitable person be found to fill lord Althorp's place? 508; the Quarterly Review on the subject, 509; answered by the Chronicle, 511; extracts, 512-15; what is the present duty of the British people? 516; extract, 516, 17.

Burke's Works, see Works of Burke.

Burnes's Travels into Bokhara, 204; the peculiar interest attached to the countries visited by the author, 205; curious frolic of superstition, 206, 7; superstition sometimes the protector of commerce, 207; extract, 207, 8; fortress of Bukkur, 208; ancient city of Mooltan, 210; its manufactures, ib.; author enters the Potewar country, 212; continues his route to the Indus, 213; singular ignis fatuus, 214; dispersion of an Armenian tribe, 215; speculations regarding the Afghans, 216; Wolff, the Jewish missionary, assisted by author, 217; description of Barmeean, 218-20; the town of Koon-dooz, 221; vivid description of Bokhara, 223-28; has its slave market, 228; its situation and population, 229; further extract, 230-32.

Canada, see Copies of letters.

Chants Chrétiens, 265; reviewed in the 'Archives du Christianisme,' 265-69; the character of nations, as of individuals, influenced by their creed, not their creed by their character, 270; French imitation of Cowper's 'I thirst, but not as once I did,' 271; 'When I lived without the Lord,' 272; with one or two exceptions, a beautiful selection of melodies, 274.

Charge delivered to the clergy of the diocese of London, 1834. By Charles, James, lord bishop of London, 517. And see Lushington's Remonstrance.

Choix de Cantiques, 265; psaulme cxxx. 275; some of the cantiques savour too much of mysticism, 276; and see Chants Chrétiens.

Christian Almanack, for 1835, 546.

Christian's Family Library, Vol. I. to X., 232; extract, 240, 41; contents, 248; is adapted for popularity, yet a poor succedaneum for a Christian library, ib.

Christian Keepsake and Missionary Annual, 424; a delightful work, 437; centenary ode, by J. Montgomery, 437, 8; excellent character of present volume, 496; the burial of Aaron, 497-501; Hughes's communion with the heart, 501.

INDEX.

- Church property, 170; who pays for the church? 171; does it belong less to dissenters, than to churchmen? 172; the ecclesiastical idea that dissenters are a proscribed caste, 173; extracts, 174-78; present pamphlet able and spirited, 178. See Established Church.
- Conybeare's elementary course of lectures, on the criticism, interpretation, and leading doctrines of the bible, 93; a work of no ordinary merit, 100; contents, 101; Aristotle, and St. Paul, 114, 15; extracts, 115-18; essay on the grammatical principles of the Hebrew and kindred oriental tongues, 525; author first treats of the roots, 526; comparative view of the verb substantive, 527; loss sustained by philological science in the death of Mr. Greenfield, 528; Semitic languages, 529; no physiological investigations can affect the fact of the original unity of the human race, 530; six ingredients in the structure and character of languages, 532; lectures on the leading doctrines of the bible, ib.; 'i. the alienation of man's moral condition,' 532, 3; 'ii. the atonement,' 533-5; 'iii. the divinity of Christ,' 535-38; 'iv. the personality of the spirit, and divine influence,' 538; author's system of theology not to be tested by the thirty-nine articles of religion, 539.
- Copies and extracts of letters from settlers in Upper Canada, 331; why should the ocean, any more than the Tweed, be a forbidden boundary to our redundant population, ib.; in adopting emigration, we exchange cares for hardships, 332; letter, dated Guelph town, 332-35; a fair statement of the rough and smooth of a settler's life, 336-7; what is independence? 337.
- Cox's outlines of lectures on the book of Daniel, 492; qualifications necessary for a clear expositor of prophecy, ib.; extract, 493, 4; the unfulfilled prophecies are at present a sealed book, 494; yet our modern fanatics maintain that past, present, and future prophecies may alike receive satisfactory explanation, 495; concluding remarks, 495, 6.
- Daily Manna, a text of scripture and verse of poetry for every day in the year, 546; specimen of contents, 548.
- De Félice's Ministère évangélique dans ses rapports avec l'état actuel des églises réformées de France, 119; progress of evangelical christianity, 119, 20; list of recent meetings of religious societies in France, 120, 21; great improvement in the style of French evangelical writers, 122.
- Dick's lectures on theology, 93; remarks on the present state of society, 94; true religion equally adapted to all stages of society, 95; if theology is worth any one's study, it is worth every one's, 96; religion, to become universal, must cease to be professional, 97; extract, 98; heads of lecture, i. to xv., 102; xvi. to cv., 103, 4; character of the work is professional, 105; which is likely to have an injurious effect, 108; extract, 109-11; scriptural and systematic theology contrasted, 112-14.
- Dymond's church and the clergy, 42.
- Edmeston's fifty original hymns, 540; extract, 545, 6.
- Edwards's Works, see Works of Edwards.
- Emigration. See copies and extracts of letters.
- Established Church. See Meek's Reasons; Stebbing's church and its adversaries; and Faulkner's letter.
- Evangelical Almanack for 1835, 546.
- Family Almanack for 1835, 546.
- Faulkner's letter to the lord chancellor on the evils of our state church, 41; author believes it is not fitted to promote the interests of the christian religion, 49; extracts, 50-58; and see Stebbing's church and its adversaries.
- Fisher's drawing room scrap book for 1835, 424; extract, 434, 5; stanzas on the death of Mr. Boswell Gregory, 436.
- Forget-me-not, for 1835, 496; the late Mr. Ackermann, 502; the protestant burial ground at Rome, 503-5; list of contributors to the volume, 505; poetical extract, ib.
- Friendship's Offering, and Winter's Wreath, for 1835, 424; poem, by Thomas Pringle, 439.
- Halley's Improved Version truly designated a creed, 24; an admirable pamphlet, 29; extract, ib.; 'mr. Yates answered, 30; further extracts, 31-3; a judicious defence of evangelical truth, on principles of sound criticism, 33.
- Hannah More's life. See Roberts's memoirs.
- Heath's Picturesque Annual for 1835, 424; editor's task executed with his usual ability, 425; Mary, queen of Scotland, ib.; Scot and Scotland, 425-28; illustrations of the present volume, 406.

INDEX.

- Hemans's scenes and hymns of life, 178; the two monuments, 178-80; more of the poetic spirit than the religious in her most sacred pieces, 180.
- Henderson's observations on the colonies of new South Wales, &c., 123; character of the convicts, 143-5. See Lang's historical and statistical account.
- Horne's Introduction to the Critical Study and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, 478; a valuable compilation, ib.; learning can be perpetuated and maintained only by endowments, 479; yet it is unfortunate that a man of real genius, to obtain compensation, is forced into taking orders, 480; contents of vol. i., 481; of vol. ii., 482; abstract of Professor Scholz's theory, 482-88; 'biographical appendix,' 488; contents of vol. iii., 489; vol. iv., 490; concluding remarks, 490-2.
- Hunter's Attorney-General versus Shore, 24; Unitarians endeavour to make good a title to the name of Presbyterians, 25; rather a remarkable variety of that genus, ib.; extract, 26; will the Church of England stretch wide her arms to receive so philosophic a body of Christians? 27; Unitarians have embraced another gospel than that revealed in the New Testament, 28. See Halley's Improved Version, &c.
- Illustrations to the Annuals, 406.
- Italy. By the author of Vathek, 75; description of author's first work, 76; continually reminded of it in present volumes, 77; Flemish landscape, ib.; view in Northern Italy, 78; Venice as it was, 79-81; scene in Lisbon, 82-85; visit to the Grande Chartreuse, 85-87.
- Jebb's Correspondence, see Thirty Years.
- Journal of the Royal Geographical Society of London. Vol. i. article, state of the Swan river colony. Vol. ii. article, interior discovery in New South Wales, 123. See Lang's historical and statistical account.
- Judkin's church and home psalmody, 316; the present not a successful attempt to supersede Dr. Watts's psalms, 322; author's hymns present many simply beautiful compositions, ib.; extracts, 322-25; second edition, 540; extracts, 541-45.
- Keepsake for 1835, 496; maintains its aristocratic character, 506; contents, 506-7.
- Kidd's Connexion between Church and State unfolded, 276; extract, 304.
- Landscape Annual for 1835, 424; extracts, 428-32; the illustrations, 408, 9.
- Lang's historical and statistical account of New South Wales, 123; our whole colonial system a tissue of blunders and crimes, 125; extract, 126; colony of New South Wales intended, at first, to be governed as a jail, 127; no idea, originally, of grafting a colony upon a penitentiary, 128; the two objects irreconcilable, 129; author proposes a Botany Bay legislature, 132; extracts, 133-4; treatment of the convicts, 134-38; the system never yet been fairly tried, 139; high time that transportation to New South Wales were abandoned, 140; three objections to the present system, 141; subject further discussed, 143-52; present work an honest and faithful testimony, 152.
- Letters, and extracts of letters, from settlers in Upper Canada, 331. See copies and extracts of letters.
- to a Dissenting Minister, of the Congregational Independent denomination, containing remarks on the principles of that sect, &c., &c., by L.S.E., 276; Billingsgate specimens of the author's malignity, 294-98; the work presents the distilled essence of the bigotry of some 'church' supporters, 299.
- to a member of parliament on the present State of Things, &c., 325; extract, ib.; author's political opinions, 326-7; 'mental light' not 'spiritual light', and 'ignorance the parent of devotion', 328.
- Literary and Theological Review. Conducted by L. Woods, jun., 338; contents, ib.; extract, 338, 9; a feeble defence of the American Colonization Society, 339; specious objections against missionary enterprises, 340; art. viii. theology and natural science, a review of Bretschneider's 'Letters to a Statesman,' 341; 'Geology and the Bible,' ib.; it would be better, if men would not pretend to know, so precisely, what is possible in the universe, and what not, 342; Cuvier contra the geologists, 343; Humboldt also, 344; apparent contradiction between geology and the bible arises from immature hypotheses, 345; 'astronomy and the bible,' 346; Copernicus, Kepler, and Newton, ib.; Kepler on the language of the bible, 347; the monks who condemned Galileo agreed with Dr. Bretschneider, 348; 'anthropology and the bible,' ib.; Bretschneider and Voltaire, 349; Voltaire answered by Haller, ib.; Cuvier and Blumenbach on the common origin of the

I N D E X.

- human race, 350, 1; 'natural history,' 351; the endeavour to convert the wicked by pointing to the works of God, is vain, 352; conclusion, 353.
- Literary Intelligence, 91, 353, 442, 523.
- Longfield's four lectures on the poor laws, 412; extract, 416-20.
- Lorraine's Church divided, 328; extract, 328, 30.
- Lushington's Remonstrance addressed to the lord bishop of London, on his sanction of certain letters, signed L. S. E., 517; extract, 518; pamphlet breathes throughout an amiable spirit, 519; a protest against episcopal petulance, 520; impolicy of the mode of warfare sanctioned by the bishop, 520-22.
- Lyte's spirit of the psalms, 316; extract, 317; free imitations preferred to some versions of the psalms, ib.; but no good effects result from putting a strained meaning upon the compositions of the inspired psalmist, ib.; author's version of psalm xx., 318; French version, ib.; and another, in English, 319; psalm xci., 320, 21; xiv., 322.
- McKerrow's letters on Church Establishments, in reply to Rev. H. Stowell, 277.
- Meek's reasons for attachment and conformity to the Church of England, 276; author misquotes St. Paul, ib.; the perversion of the sense of the word 'church,' 278; the established church, viewed as a religious body, but one among several non-established churches, ib.; does St. Paul teach obedience to the powers that be, in the matter of religious belief? 279; the government, by protecting, sanctions dissenters, 280; the politician cannot fail to appreciate their value and importance, 281; author's 'reasons for attachment' summarily expressed, 282, 3; he cannot conceive that any one should fail to be convinced by them, 283; yet, he has not shown how a mere planet can be the centre of a system, ib.; his 'reasons' further discussed, 283, 4; a curious argument for the church, that Whitfield and Wesley, some time back, were its ministers, 284; so were Owen, Baxter, Bates, &c., ib.; unity is not uniformity, communion conformity, nor agreement compulsion, 285; how is non-conformity to be extinguished readier now than before the days of Whitfield and Wesley? 286; the greater part of the present volume consists of an indictment of the Dissenters, ib.; but Dissenters put forward no such exorbitant demands as either the Church of England, or of Rome, 287; bad spirit manifested in some passing for evangelical clergymen, 288; the present volume abounds in misrepresentations, 289; example, ib.; author cites some already refuted remarks of bishop Blomfield, 290; and misrepresents Mr. Binney, 291, 2.
- New British province of South Australia, 123; extract, 153.
- Oriental Annual for 1835, 424; consists of scenes in Bengal, 432; cobra di capello, 433, 4; the illustrations, 410, 11.
- Paraphrastic Translation of St. Paul's epistle to the Romans. By Laicus. 314; fails, in many instances, to convey the genuine sense of the original, ib.; example, ib.; grammatical improprieties, 315; defective character of the whole publication, 316.
- Poetical works of rev. George Crabbe, edited by his son, 305; Crabbe's 'posthumous tales,' 305; their excellence, ib.; extracts, 306-9; 'the ancient mansion,' 309-13; vol. viii., if inferior in vigour, surpasses the rest in amusement, 314.
- Politics. See Bulwer's letter.
- Poor Laws. See Pratt's Act, &c.
- Pratt's Act for the amendment and better administration of the laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales, 412; government merits the highest praise for this new law, ib.; its two objects, 413; takes from the magistrate his mischievous prerogative, 414; the object of the allowance system to keep down the rate of wages, 415, 16; unfair that the pauper should compete with the labourer, 420; marriage by the late law was not a security for virtue, but a reparation for its loss, 421; the present act a great improvement in this respect, 422; analysis of the act, 423.
- Primary address of the annual assembly of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, 87; all that an address ought to be, ib.; extract, 87-90.
- Pritchard's scriptural provision for the maintenance and propagation of Christianity, stated, 276; not true that till within the last 40 years, the lawfulness of religious establishments was unquestioned, 301; occasion of author's present sermon, 302; extract, ib.; and see Meek's reasons.

INDEX.

Psalmody. See Chants Chrétiens; Lyte's spirit of the psalms; and Judkin's church and home psalmody.

Quarterly Review, No. civ. Postscript. See Bulwer's letter.

Questions, calmly considered, concerning the Church of the living God, &c. By Indagator, 42; written in a conciliatory spirit, 71; what is to be done under existing circumstances? 72, 3.

Ragg's (Thomas) Deity, 357; a remarkable production, ib.; mr. Montgomery's introductory essay, 358; argumentative skill and cultivated taste displayed in the poem, 359; criticised in the Times newspaper, 360; poem divided into three parts, 361; extracts, 361—67; author a young mechanic, working fourteen hours a day, 367; further extracts, 367—70; Part II. on the Nature of the Divine Subsistence, 370—72; contains skill and ingenuity, but it is ingenuity misplaced, 373; eloquent specimen of poetical talent and fervent piety, 374—76.

Report from his Majesty's Commissioners for inquiring into the administration, &c., of the poor laws, 412. See Pratt's Act for the Amendment, &c.

Reyroux's Christian Theology. Translated from Benedict Pictet, 93; contents, 104; serious faults in the work, 106-8.

Roberts's Memoirs of the Life and Correspondence of Mrs. Hannah More, 445; particulars of her father, 446, 7; her early acquaintance, 448, 9; an offer of marriage, 450, 51; pays her first visit to London, 451; distinguished friends, 452; trial of the Duchess of Kingston, 453; Garrick, 454, 5; Johnson, 456-61; anecdote, 462; Professor Kennicott, 463; repartee, 464; Wilberforce, 465; letter to the rev. John Newton, 466; to Mr. Walpole, 467, 68; mrs. More's exertions in religiously instructing the poor, 469-72; her own advancement in spiritual knowledge, 472-74; absence of religion from the education of the higher classes, 474; Hannah More, and Harriet Martineau, 475; mrs. More removes to Barley Wood, 476; dies at Clifton, 478.

Robinson's Unity of the Church, 329; union among Christians is beginning to be better understood, ib.; author's advice to churchmen, 330, 31.

Sacred Classics, Vols. I. to VIII., 232; design of the work, unexceptionable, 243; extract from introductory essay, 244; contents of present volumes, 245; re-remarks on the undertaking, 245-48.

Speech of H. G. Ward, esq. M. P., respecting the Irish Church, 42; goes to the root of the evil, 59; extract, 60, 1. And see Stebbing's Church and its adversaries.

Stebbing's church and its adversaries, 41; the two prevalent misconceptions on the subject, 42; the opinions of the modern advocates of Church establishments of recent formation, 44; doings at a recent installation at Oxford, 45; our ancestors never mistook a hierarchy for a body of public instructors, 46; the church is in danger, 48; the controversy does not lie between churchmen and dissenters, 49; an establishment is not politically useful, nor just, even should it rest upon the broad basis of population, 61; extract, 67-9; the Establishment was intended to repress the free progress of knowledge, not to advance it, 70; to be rendered efficient, its whole constitution must be changed, 70, 71; recent extraordinary appeals to the voluntary principle, 73-5.

Stowel's I am a Churchman. Intended for the younger and more unlearned Members of the Church of England, 279; a very unlearned reason for being a churchman, ib.; author's other twelve reasons, 282; would form good reasons for conforming to the Roman catholic church, ib.

Sturt's two expeditions into the Interior of Southern Australia, 123.

Taylor's Philip von Artevelde, 248; a great philosopher only can make a great poet, 249; Byron's poetry, throughout, is 'Byron at home,' ib.; strictures on Byron's heroes, 250; opening of the present work, 251; progress of the story, 252-63; poetry of the finest order, and versification unexceptionable, 264.

Theological Library, Vols. IV. to VIII., 232; contents, ib.; extract from Evans's Scripture Biography, 233; his sketch of Ezra, 233-35; author's style like Dr. Collyer's, 235; reflections on the character of Felix, 235, 6; 'theological library,' a misnomer, 236; extract from Le Bas's life of Cranmer, 237-39; the doctrines of 'our Church,' whether at variance with Calvin or not, are at variance with the Articles, 242; why should the eulogist of Cranmer depreciate Calvin? 243.

INDEX.

- Thirty Years' Correspondence between John Jebb, Bishop of Limerick, and Alexander Knox, esq., 376; this is no ordinary correspondence, ib.; Knox's erroneous opinions, 377; imbibed by his correspondent, ib.; they impair the direct usefulness of the work, 379; Knox's admirable description of what Christian preaching should be, 380; extract, 380-82; the two prevailing errors in most pulpits, 382; Howe's striking passage on the proneness to exalt one doctrine to the neglect of another, 383, 4; Knox's character of Bishop Hall, 385; this world a wretched place, 385, 6; remarks on St. Bernard's writings, 386; on Wesleyanism, 387; Mr. Knox writes for the Eclectic Review, 389; remarks on the increase of dissenters, 392, 3; interesting insight into Bishop Jebb's character, 393-95; letters from John Wesley to Knox, 396, 7; Knox's erroneous criticism on the Eclectic, 398; he was no proper adviser for a Christian bishop, 399; extract of a letter by Jebb, 399-402; Knox's strictures on Southey's life of Wesley, 402-4; bishop Jebb's errors, 404, 5.
- Tiark's Conjugation of the Greek Verb, made easy for the use of schools, 153.
- Practical Grammar of the German Language, 153; excellence of the work, 154.
- Tottie's Plain Statement of the Trusts and recent administration of lady Hewley's charities, 24; extract, 28. See Hunter's Attorney General versus Shore.
- Transportation, system of; see Whately's remarks; and Lang's historical and statistical account, &c.
- Trollope's Belgium and Western Germany in 1833, 157; extract, 158, 9; Prussian system of education, 159, 60; the roman catholic religion, 161, 2; pleasing extract, 164, 6; Baden-Baden, 166-68; first view of the Hartz, 168, 9; ascent of the Brocken, 169, 70.
- Turner's Sermon preached in Barley Church, 41; author's aim in present publication, 62; extracts, 63-66.
- Unitarian controversy, see Hunter's Attorney Gen. v. Shore; and Halley's Improved Version.
- Whately's remarks on transportation, 124; extracts, 126; remarks of the French commissioners on our system of transportation, 130-31. And see Lang's historical and statistical account.
- Works recently published, 92, 180, 264, 356, 444, 524.
- Works of the Right Hon. Edmund Burke, 1; no one, whatever his political creed, but may find something in Burke's opinions, to suit his taste, ib.; not fair, however, to impute to him a dereliction of principle, 2; he was the apostle of political expediency, 3; Burke contra the House of Commons, 4; for it, 5; on the popular discontents, 6; on ex-officio informations, 7; on the objections against church reform, 8-11; on relief to dissenters, 11, 12; Burke's inconsistencies, 13; eloquent speech on the profusion of the minister, 14-16; how to answer the desires of the people, 17; sweeping character of the reform proposed by Burke, 19; faults of his oratory, 20-23.
- Works of Jonathan Edwards, 181; this edition unquestionably the best that has appeared of President Edwards's Works, ib.; "Types of the Messiah," 182; "Notes on the Bible," ib.; Edwards's sermons eminently instructive, ib.; the effects produced often as great as by Whitfield's addresses, 183; he gave an impulse to the minds of his countrymen which they have never lost, ib.; the metaphysical propensity of his mind shown in a first effort of his pen, 184; extract, ib.; the memoir of Edwards's life deserving a most careful perusal, 185; revival of religion at Northampton, 185, 6; analysis of Edwards's mind, 187-9; Edwards's reasoning not worthless because hypothetical, 190; similarity of the mind of Edwards to that of Descartes, 191; the objections considered touching the defects of his argumentation, 192-97.
- Works of Hannah More, Vols. I. to IV., 445; see Roberts's Memoirs.
- Yates's Letter to the Vice-Chancellor of England, in reply to his Honour's remarks relative to the British and foreign unitarian association, 24. See Halley's Improved Version, &c.

In one Volume 8vo, price 8s.,

THE TRUTHS OF RELIGION. By JAMES DOUGLAS,
Esq., of Cavers. Second Edition.

By the same Author,

In one volume 8vo, price 8s.,

ERRORS REGARDING RELIGION.

In one volume 12mo, price 4s. 6d.,

THE ADVANCEMENT OF SOCIETY IN KNOWLEDGE
AND RELIGION. Third Edition.

Price Two Shillings,

THE PROSPECTS OF BRITAIN.

Third Edition.

Price Sixpence, or bound and gilt, One Shilling.

THOUGHTS ON PRAYER AT THE PRESENT TIME.
Fourth Edition; neat pocket size.

Price 1s. 6d.,

AN ADDRESS ON SLAVERY, SABBATH PROTECTION, AND CHURCH REFORM.

Adam and Charles Black, Edinburgh; Longman and Co., London.

---

FAMILY LIBRARY.

On January 1st, Vols. XLVIII. and XLIX. of

THE FAMILY LIBRARY; being the HISTORY of BRITISH INDIA, Vols. II. and III.

The Fourth Volume, which completes the Work, will be published on the 1st of February.

London: John Murray, Albemarle-street; sold by Thomas Tegg and Son, Cheapside; and may be procured by order from any Bookseller in the United Kingdom.

Now ready,

The HISTORY of the MUTINY of the BOUNTY. The second edition. Also,

The LIFE of NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE. In 2 vols.,
third edition.

THE CONGREGATIONAL MAGAZINE,

For January 1835, price 1s.,

Contains a Biographical Notice of the late Dr. Carey, of Serampore. Notes of a Tour on the Continent, by a Dissenting Minister.—Two Letters, by a Quiet Looker-on, (reprinted from the Morning Chronicle.)—On the proposed Separation of Church and State.—REVIEWS—of Milner's Life of Dr. Watts.—Memoirs of Mrs. Hannah More.—Gathercole's Letters to a Dissenting Minister.—Lushington's Remonstrance to the Bishop of London, &c., together with the Transactions of the Congregational Dissenters, and Miscellaneous Intelligence.

Published on the 1st of every month, by Jackson and Walford, 18, St. Paul's Church-yard, and sold by all Booksellers.

---

NEW WORKS,

Just published by Jackson & Walford, 18, St. Paul's Churchyard,

I.

THE CAUSES of the CORRUPTION of CHRISTIANITY, By the Rev. ROBERT VAUGHAN, Professor of Ancient and Modern History in the University of London. Author of the "Life of Wycliffe," &c., 8vo., 10s. 6d. cloth.

"He has brought to his undertaking the knowledge of the historian, the learning of the divine, and the spirit of the philosopher."—Spectator.

"The examination of the effects produced on Christianity, by the influence of Gentile Philosophy, is equally remarkable for learning and discrimination."—Athenæum.

II.

LECTURES on the ATHEISTIC CONTROVERSY: delivered at Bradford, Yorkshire. By the Rev. B. GODWIN. Author of "Lectures on British Colonial Slavery," &c., 8vo., 6s. cloth.

"... deserves to rank with Butler, Clarke, and Paley. If any controversial work could win converts, this is one of the best calculated to effect that object."—Athenæum.

III.

A DISCOURSE of NATURAL and MORAL IMPOTENCY. By JOSEPH TRUMAN, B.D. A New Edition, with a Biographical Introduction. By HENRY ROGERS. Royal 16mo., 3s. cloth.

"We recommend this acute little piece to all our Theological students and young pastors, who will perceive that they are also greatly indebted to Mr. Rogers for his admirable introduction."—Baptist Magazine.

IV.

CHRISTIAN ETHICS, or Moral Philosophy, on the Principles of Divine Revelation. By RALPH WARDLAW, D.D. Second Edition. 8vo., 10s. 6d. cloth.

"Dr. W. has conducted his argument with profound theological wisdom, and admirable philosophical acuteness."—Christian Guardian.

"A most valuable work, which will be read with deep interest, and which, if perused with a proper spirit, can hardly fail to communicate much important instruction."—Imperial Magazine.

"This book will certainly not lower Dr. Wardlaw's high character for ability, thought, and learning."—British Magazine.

